One Year Forecasts predict the probability that a stock-market will rise over the next year. Investors should seek to invest in markets with forecasts of 60-100%, while avoiding markets with forecasts of 0-40%. Bullish = Favourable. Bearish = Unfavourable.

World Stockmarket Outlook

"Let's hope 2023 is a better year than 2022" writes a subscriber, "but I'm not holding my breath".

That is a fairly common sentiment . . . and it is difficult for any stockmarket investor to hold non-consensus views about the future of the stockmarket.

Any widely held view, however, will likely be fully reflected in current share prices . . . and therefore any widely held expectation of the stockmarket's future performance is likely to be wrong.

If most investors expect share prices to fall in the future - perhaps owing to current economic problems or the expectation of a future recession - them most investors have probably already sold shares or have deferred purchases and are holding surplus cash.

Most first time stockmarket investors start buying shares just before a market peak. Many later "give up" on the stockmarket a few years later, cutting their losses and selling out just ahead of a market low.

This newsletter may laugh at these naive, first time investors . . . but the reality is that experienced, long term investors (and even your Editor) still feel the same emotional desire to BUY when the market is buoyant (and share prices are high) . . . and hide away under a dark stone when the market is depressed (and share prices are cheap).

So how can investors deal with this?

Firstly, your Editor's early research determined that the stockmarket offered the best opportunities to build investment wealth over the long term. So the stockmarket's return over the next month or the next year is not really important. 60% of years the market may go up. 40% of years it may go down. What does it matter if the year ahead is an up or down year when our important goal is tripling or quadrupling our investment wealth over the next decade? And then repeating that again the next decade.

Secondly, investors can accept that emotional factors will give them false messages. To paraphrase Buffett "Be fearful when others including yourself are greedy, and greedy when others including yourself are fearful". Investors can be aware of the consensus view, and their own emotional views, but it will usually be best to use this as a contrary opinion indicator and do the opposite.

Is that easy? Of course not! But if you feel really strongly about anything in the stockmarket then you are probably being driven by emotional factors and it is time to reassess your thinking. Nothing is certain.

Of course, no matter how well you may present your argument, most of the time your spouse, members of your share group and most other investors will remain unconvinced. It is often best not to discuss the stockmarket with others, but if you do the most common response is "You may be right, but I'm still going to [insert as appropriate] (1) keep my Brierley, Equiticorp and Chase shares (2) hold cash as I think the market is going to crash (3) buy Bitcoin".

Such a response virtually guarantees your investment thinking is valid and correct!
